Jordan Dailey is a strategic advocate who helps clients navigate sensitive workplace challenges with clarity, judgment, and a focus on practical results. Known for combining strong advocacy with business-minded counseling, Jordan partners with clients to resolve disputes, reduce risk, and make informed decisions that support their broader goals.

Jordan represents clients in labor and employment matters involving discrimination and retaliation claims, workplace policies, employee relations, and wage and hour issues. He also draws on experience working in the in-house legal department of a global financial technology company during law school, which gave him practical insight into the inner workings of a large organization and the business needs that shape legal decision-making.

In addition to his labor and employment practice, Jordan represents clients in complex business disputes, with a particular focus on commercial matters, including breach of contract claims and other high-stakes conflicts. Jordan develops case strategy, drafts pleadings and dispositive motions, manages discovery, and advocates for clients in negotiations and court proceedings.
