Clients in the financial services industry and other sophisticated and highly regulated businesses look to Brendan Gerdes for outstanding support in litigation, investigations, and responses to government inquiries.

Brendan is a talented legal writer and researcher who has prepared numerous winning procedural, evidentiary, and dispositive motions in state and federal court. He is also an accomplished advocate with a strong courtroom presence and experience in examining witnesses at trial and presenting compelling arguments in arbitration proceedings.

Clients managing internal investigations, including in response to Federal Trade Commission and Department of Justice Civil Investigative Demands, value his attention to detail and careful preparation in conducting sensitive and confidential witness interviews.

Before entering private practice, Brendan served criminal defendants pro bono through Northwestern Pritzker School of Law's Bluhm Legal Clinic and worked as an information technology consultant.
