Matt Kennison thrives in stressful situations. He knows how to anticipate what's likely to happen next, act quickly, and help plot the course that will serve the best interests of his clients.

Matt conducts internal investigations on behalf of a wide array of clients across various industries, including healthcare, finance, education, and automotive, and has also assisted clients in assessing and structuring internal compliance programs. Matt regularly assists clients in responding to DOJ, SEC, state Attorney General, and other regulators' inquiries, and his collaborative and creative approach generates opportunities for clients to effectively address the government's interest. Matt is a member of RSHC's Higher Education team, where he has partnered with colleges and universities to act as the external investigator in sensitive Title IX investigations.

Matt has extensive litigation experience in many areas, including federal antitrust, civil rights, Title IX litigation, civil RICO, shareholder disputes, securities litigation, automotive supplier disputes, personal injury defense, and other complex commercial disputes. He has handled litigation for a diverse array of clients, including global investment management companies, national insurance companies, college sports associations, automotive suppliers, national transportation companies, colleges and universities, technology companies, and nonprofit organizations. Matt manages all facets of complex discovery, mediation, expert preparation, motion practice, and settlement negotiations, and has been an integral member of multiple trial and appellate teams.

Prior to joining the legal profession, Matt served as a detective for the Long Beach Police Department, where he conducted criminal investigations into felony crimes, including for narcotics trafficking, violent crimes, and fraud. The experiences Matt gained while working as a police detective, combined with his legal training and experience, make Matt a uniquely effective and elite investigator and litigator.
