A former Business Court clerk and an accomplished legal writer and researcher, Joshua Roquemore brings strong organizational and communication skills to his practice as a commercial litigator.

Focusing his work on defending the interests of businesses in complex civil matters, Joshua is well-versed in handling written discovery work, motions, and depositions, as well as arguing motions in court. He is particularly skilled at translating legal issues into clear language and connecting legal strategy to business goals.

Before entering private practice, Joshua worked as a Summer Clerk for the Honorable Gregory P. McGuire on the North Carolina Business Court. While there, he reviewed pleadings and motions, drafted judicial orders, and attended hearings and trials, gaining insight into in every stage of civil litigation from the initial complaint to the jury verdict or settlement. Joshua also previously spent a semester working in house for the UNC Office of University Counsel, where he conducted legal research, drafted legal memos, and served on a GDPR regulatory compliance task force.

Joshua is a graduate of the University of North Carolina School of Law, where he was a staff member and an articles and notes editor for the North Carolina Banking Institute Journal and worked as a Research Assistant for Professor William P. Marshall, one of the nation's leading First Amendment legal scholars.

A fan of craft beer and excellent coffee, Joshua also enjoys playing disc golf and spending time with his wife and their pet basset hound.
