Nathan is a collaborative, solution-focused employment lawyer who helps clients navigate complex workplace issues with practicality and a steady, measured approach. As Counsel in the firm's Employment group, he blends the strategic perspective of a litigator with the real-world insight of a former HR professional.

He represents employers in a wide range of employment and workplace disputes in federal and state courts, developing defense strategies tailored to each client's business and risk profile. Nathan guides clients through every stage of litigation—from discovery and depositions to motion practice and trial—prioritizing clear communication and informed, client-driven decisions.

Beyond litigation, Nathan is a trusted advisor to C-suite leaders, general counsel, and HR executives. He provides day-to-day counsel on compliance, policy development, employee relations, investigations, workforce changes, and cross-jurisdictional HR challenges. His guidance emphasizes early issue-spotting, business continuity, and practical, workable solutions.

Nathan's HR background shapes his approach. Before law school, he supported policy development, employee relations, compensation processes, and wage-and-hour compliance, giving him a grounded understanding of how legal decisions affect internal teams and daily operations.
