Jennifer Steeve handles high-stakes trial and appellate matters nationwide on behalf of major companies in a variety of industries, including aviation, finance, energy, and technology.

Clients value her balance of tireless advocacy with a focus on their bottom line and business interests. She is noted for being careful in preparation and fearless in execution.

Jen's practice includes a particular focus on complex commercial litigation, aviation defense, appellate work, and autonomous vehicles. She began her appellate career by winning her law school's moot court competition before Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor, and she has worked on more than 100 appeals in practice.

Jen spends her non-lawyering hours focused on the next generation. She raises her young son and daughter, mentors students at her alma maters, and shares her love of horses by giving riding lessons at her barn.

Jen is the Deputy of the firm's Appeals Practice Team.
