RSHC WELCOMES NEW DIRECTOR OF ATTORNEY DEVELOPMENT

CHICAGO – Riley Safer Holmes & Cancila LLP (RSHC) today announced that Peter Glowacki has joined the firm as its new Attorney Development Director.

Glowacki, who, earlier in his career, spent seven years as the Director of Training and Development at Sidley Austin LLP, will work closely with the firm’s leaders to identify learning and practice opportunities that help advance lawyers professionally.

“We are excited about the experience and perspective Peter brings to the firm,” said RSHC Managing Partner Patricia Brown Holmes. “It’s an essential part of our culture that we’re constantly looking for ways we can take our work and ourselves to the next level of excellence. Peter is someone who truly enjoys helping people and organizations be the best versions of themselves.”

RSHC is ranked by Chambers & Partners as among the nation’s top firms in General Commercial and White Collar Crime & Government Investigations Litigation. Chambers also recently short-listed RSHC as an Outstanding Firm and Holmes as an Outstanding Leader for its Diversity & Inclusion Awards, set to be announced in June. In 2022, the firm was honored as a Litigation Leader in three different practice areas: Class Actions, Complex Commercial Litigation, and Product Liability by the legal industry consultant BTI Consulting Group, which also identified RSHC, based on results of a survey of in-house counsel, as one of the legal industry’s “Frequently Recommended” firms for the year. The firm has been recognized for its inclusive culture and deep commitment to pro bono service with awards from Law360, the Chicago Committee on Minorities in Large Law Firms, and clients including Exelon and McDonald’s.

“It’s a real honor to be joining a firm that is so committed to both clients and culture,” Glowacki said. “Everyone here understands that the best teams deliver the best results so they are excited about investing in their attorneys’ development as I am to be working with them to help shape it.”

Glowacki’s professional experience includes seven years as the Chief Learning Officer of the Residential Real Estate Council (RRC), a trade association and leading education resource for professionals in the real estate industry. There he expanded professional development offerings, introduced new certifications, and increased revenues. Earlier in his career, as the Director of the ABA Center for Continuing Legal Education, he successfully introduced new modalities of learning and technology, assisted lawyers at all stages with their career development, and managed the organization's continuing education accreditation. He holds a B.A. in broadcast and electronic communication and a B.A. in psychology from Marquette University, as well as a J.D. and LL.M Information Technology from the John Marshall School of Law (UIC).
